The Miss Black USA Pageant and Scholarship Foundation, Inc., is a non-profit corporation dedicated to providing educational opportunities to outstanding young women of color, and to develop the "whole woman" -- mind, body and spirit.

We celebrate scholastic achievement, and believe that education is the key to lifelong success and empowerment. We proudly promote education and leadership through scholarships opportunities.

We are also a community-driven organization, and are committed to addressing health and education -- two leading social issues in the African American community -- and during their reigns, winners of the official "Miss Black USA" state pageants use their civic platforms to promote awareness of these issues.

OUR STORY

On June 6, 1987, the J.W. Marriott hotel ballroom in Washington, D.C. was transformed into an elegant showplace. The atmosphere was electric. It was standing room only.

A celebrity panel of judges from the sports, entertainment, media and fashion industries took their seats. And at precisely 8:00pm, the lights dimmed and the curtains were raised. Something fresh, new and very special was unfolding...and everyone present could feel it.

And in a flash, there they were: 21 stunning, smart and talented African American women delegates from across the nation, representing the dreams of our ancestors, took to the runway.

The delegates modeled one-piece swimsuits in bold and shimmering palettes. And then, inspired by the works of some of the greatest African American writers and artists, they showcased their talents and performed everything from Billy Holiday, to ballet, to tap and modern dance, to dramatic recitations from the works of Maya Angelou, Nikki Giovanni, Zora Neale Hurston, and the renowned list went on. This was followed by the eveningwear competition, where delegates graced the runway with layers of chiffon flowing gowns, panels of lace, and strapless dresses that were made for the red carpet. These academic divas made no secret of their ambition to succeed, their high aspirations, and the positive change that they were advocating in their communities.

Alas, the remarkable evening culminated in the crowning of the first-ever Miss Black USA, Tamiko Gibson, a 21-year old University of Maryland broadcasting journalism student.

Bursting with pride, those gathered on both the runway and in the audience on magical night in 1987 bid farewell to the Cotton Club and the Savoy, and ushered in a new era: one that empowered African American women to conquer all.

And today, more than two decades later, the tradition continues...
